

Humboldt Station Pilot Fare gates and Fare Vending Machines

- The fare gates and new Fare Vending Machines at Metro's Humboldt-Hospital Station are the beginning of the next step we are taking toward implementation of our new account – based fare collection system.
- The faregates and Fare Vending Machines will utilize smart card technology to give Metro's customers newer, faster, and more convenient methods to pay for and board your favorite buses and trains.
- The Fare Vending Machines do not sell anything that the public can use in the current fare system, so the public cannot use them yet.
- The fare gates are not yet open to the public.
- The equipment is in testing for now, so people will see it in powered – down mode. Be advised that Metro's authorized staff is performing testing to guarantee that everything goes smoothly when we launch the system to the general public.
- The general time frame for the launch of the new system is scheduled for late spring to summer, 2020.
- We'll make plenty of public information available as we near the final implementation of the new system, so watch for information in the stations, on our web site, and on-board vehicles as we move into the next phase of our new system.

Thanks for choosing NFTA-Metro for your transportation needs.
